

Treatment Resources for Substance Use Disorders

The treatment of substance use disorders can be very complex; there are many levels of care and the treatment network can be challenging to navigate. Substance use disorders are chronic and require long term treatment and a continuum of care. There is no one treatment that is ideal for everyone; treatment must be individualized to the person's specific needs and will often include involvement in additional services to support other challenges that they face, such as services for mental health issues, vocational needs, housing needs, medical care, and legal concerns. Below is a list of some local treatment programs in Essex County and the greater Boston area. This is not intended to be a comprehensive list of all programs. Levels of Care and Local Resources for Substance Use Disorders

OUTPATIENT TREATMENT – Outpatient treatment is provided in an office setting by professionals specializing in substance use disorders that includes assessment, participation in regularly scheduled individual, group, or family therapy, often in conjunction with participation in self-help groups. Services are typically available to individuals who are dealing with co-occurring substance use and mental health disorders.

INTENSIVE OUTPATIENT TREATMENT - Intensive outpatient services (including partial hospitalization programs) are provided by professionals specializing in substance use disorders and include regularly scheduled sessions in a structured program with a minimum of 9 treatment hours per week. Day and evening programs are available. This level of care is typically recommended for individuals who have a higher likelihood of relapse without close monitoring and support who may lack a supportive environment, but are able to manage their recovery with enhanced structure and support

DETOXIFICATION PROGRAMS – Detox programs last anywhere from 3-7 days. Detox centers provide care to minimize physical withdrawal symptoms and to keep individuals safe while stopping alcohol or other drug use. Programs offer different detox medications and ideally will incorporate counseling and group therapy during detox to help with the psychological distress that the individual may experience as well. These programs will also work with people to find post-detox treatment programs or to create a follow up treatment plan. Detox only removes the drug from someone’s system and is not “treatment” for a substance use disorder or mental illness. Detox may also be provided on an outpatient basis

POST DETOX OR TRANSITIONAL SUPPORT SERVICES (TSS) – Formerly referred to as “holding programs”, post-detox or transitional programs are for individuals who have completed a detox. They are short-term residential programs that accept people from detox facilities. Caseworkers make referrals to other programs such as halfway houses and assist residents in getting to interviews for placement at other programs. Also referred to as stabilization, the goals of the programs are to provide short-term clinical and support services, maximizing the potential for successful recovery, and providing the client with an understanding and acceptance of the need for continued treatment to prevent relapse.

CLINICAL STABILIZATION SERVICES (CSS) – Clinical stabilization services provide short term residential treatment, stabilization and comprehensive discharge planning for clients who either do not qualify for medically monitored detoxification or have already completed detox. The program includes a comprehensive assessment, treatment planning, individual and group counseling, health education and monitoring, aftercare planning and follow up. Length of stay ranges from 14-30 days

THERAPEUTIC COMMUNITY (TC) – Therapeutic communities are highly structured programs, typically for 6 to 12 months, but sometimes longer. Individuals in this type of program include those with relatively long histories of drug dependence, involvement in serious criminal activities, and seriously impaired social functioning. The focus of the TC is on the re-socialization of the individual to a drug-free, crime-free lifestyle

408 Meridian St., East Boston, MA
Phone: (617) 569-6050

HALFWAY HOUSE OR RESIDENTIAL PROGRAMS – These programs are long term (about 6-9 months) residential substance use treatment programs. They offer housing, meals, and meetings in a safe and structured community environment with the goal of having each resident work on his or her recovery and learn the skills needed to establish a better quality of life. All halfway houses include drug testing and case management services and many allow individuals to work or seek work while in the program. Some programs are gender specific. Note: These programs rarely take people “from the street”. They must be referred directly from a TSS, post-detox, or CSS facility to ensure they are medically cleared.

SOBER HOUSING – Sober housing provides a longer stay than a halfway house with less structure, while maintaining a sober and safe living environment. Sober housing serves as the interim between the halfway house and returning to an individual's former life or full independent living. Sober housing often requires drug testing, house meetings, 12 step meetings, and involvement in outpatient counseling; overnight guests are not allowed and there is a weekly pay system. Note: Sober housing is not regulated and it should be noted that not all facilities offering "sober housing" are safe. Research on available sober housing environments is strongly advised. The facilities included on this list are known to include the elements listed above.

HARM REDUCTION PROGRAMS – These programs are based on a commitment to public health and human rights. Harm reduction accepts, for better or worse, that licit and illicit drug use is part of our world and works to minimize the harmful effects on individuals and the community. Harm reduction does not attempt to minimize or ignore the real and tragic harm and danger associated with licit and illicit drug use. Harm reduction services play a crucial role in the continuum of care for individuals who are using or experiencing relapse and keeps individuals connected to care and support throughout their process. Services provided by all harm reduction programs include:

- HIV testing/Hepatitis C testing/STI testing
 - Overdose Education and Naloxone (Narcan) distribution
 - HIV and Hepatitis C risk reduction supplies
 - Referrals to substance use treatment and transportation
 - Risk reduction counseling for substance users
 - Resources for families and loved ones of substance users
